

What is an Event?

Any time you share the power of Discovery with other educators (3 or more), you are hosting an event. This includes all Discovery resources like Discovery Education streaming, Science, Health, Think Link Assessment, and Discovery School.

You learn a lot in those formal one hour (or more) professional development trainings – and that is an example of one event. However, how much do you learn when you're at the lunch table talking with fellow teachers about something you taught in class today? Or, what if you're in a planning session and you share a video that meets that lesson's needs? Guess what? Those informal sharing sessions are events! Here are some other examples:

- Share an integration idea over lunch
- Demonstrate a skill to your peers before, during, or after school
- Conduct a hands-on workshops in classrooms, computer labs, training centers, etc.
- Showcase sample student work or projects at Open House or PTA meetings
- Discuss ways to use digital media during planning sessions with members of school or district instructional committees
